We went to lunch at Versailles, where we had the Tvedes and Rowland Burden-Miller. I tried to persuade Dolly to write her memoirs and bring into them her recollections of her spectacular Radziwill and other relatives. The ramifications of her family connections are amazing but there is a lapse of about 100 years in the history of the Radziwills which ought to be brought up to date.

We returned to Paris and Woody Wallner came to see us. He is finding life rather unexciting in Belgrade but the work most interesting. As yet, no decision has been made so far as he knows to send a successor to George Allen, who has now taken up his post in India.

Messrs. Schine and Cohn, Senator McCarthy's two ambitious young hatchet men, have recently inspected operations in Belgrade but appear to have caused no trouble there. Their visits to other places were apparently resented by the local journalists, especially in England.

The shadow of McCarthy rests heavily over the State Department. His influence has been entirely destructive and he is really an evil man to whom the Administration should give no quarter. They should have fought him to a finish long ago.
